27 May 1954.

Central Committee of the PCH passed resolutions, pointing out that recent events made it impossible for the moment to carry out their plans as anticipated, and they should concentrate upon political training of members; covert infiltration into student, professional, teachers and labor organizations; collection of dues, and propaganda designed to unmask imperialistic aims of U.S. and to educate the workers so they will seek the PCH as the party which will give them their "freedom". Following temporary secretaries appointed in view of action by authorities against some Communists: Trinidad SANTOS Miralda, Manuel Antonio SIERRA, Julio OVIEDO Mendoza, Juan B. CANALES, Modesto CORTES, Ruben PORTILLO, Efrain GARAY and Cristobal HERRERA. Was stated that following are members of "Bureau of PCH": Cesar A. Coto, Dionisio BEJARANO, Rigoberto PADILLA, Julio C. Cesar Augusto COTO and Francisco CARDONA in jail in Tegucigalpa.

SOURCE COMMENT: There is no documentary evidence to show instruction received by Honduran Communists for handling the strike. While there were advisors from Guatemala, Honduran Communists such as Rigoberto PADILLA who had been trained behind the Iron Curtain and in Guatemala were the principal organizers and leaders of the strike. During the latter part of May 1954, there were constant rumors that an individual known only as "Don Juan" was the brains behind the Communists in El Progreso. This individual has been identified as Manuel ZUNIGA, a Honduran, who entered Honduras from Guatemala under an assumed name.
